Preamble

Psychiatric Rehabilitation Australia (PRA) had a long history as a mental health and disability service organisation in New South Wales. It commenced in 1955 with the aim of providing social activity for patients in Callan Park Hospital, and rehabilitation services that would support independent living in the community. PRA had been active since that time in establishing new services in New South Wales to meet the urgent need for more and better services to support those with a lived experience of a mental health issue in New South Wales and beyond.

The Richmond Fellowship of NSW (RFNSW) was established in 1973 initially to provide half-way houses for people with a lived experience of a mental health issue leaving hospital care, based on the model established in the United Kingdom in the 1950s. RFNSW maintained its commitment to the independence and quality of life of people with a lived experience of a mental health issue, while growing and diversifying its services across New South Wales. RFNSW's mission was to support people with a lived experience of a mental health issue and related needs to resource their recovery journey and live a fulfilling life in the community. RFNSW's services and programs extended into most parts of NSW, including many rural and remote communities.

In 2012, PRA and RFNSW identified that they could expand and enhance their range of services to current and future people who might need their support through a merger of their operations and services. The merged organisation used all the assets and liabilities of both PRA and RFNSW to eventually operate as a single body, Richmond PRA Limited, mandated to achieve the vision and carry on the mission of working in partnership with people with a lived experience of a mental health issue and their families and carers to empower them in their recovery and independence. Their shared commitment to meaningful outcomes for people with a lived experience of a mental health issue brought these two organisations to the point where they held similar views on the future of mental health services in Australia, and how they might best play their part in substantially improving the lives of people living with a mental health issue, their families and their carers.
